How Often is a Motor Carrier Required to Review the Motor Vehicle Record of a Driver that Operates a Commercial Motor Vehicle?

The Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations requires a motor carrier qualifying a new driver to obtain and review the motor vehicle record of the driver within 30 days of the date of hire CFR 391.23. As a Better Business Practice it is recommended that the Motor vehicle record be obtained and reviewed prior to making an offer of employment to the driver applicant.

After the driver is qualified the regulations require that at least once every 12 months that the motor carrier make an inquiry into the driving record of each driver it employs, covering at least the preceding 12 months, to the appropriate agency of every State in which the driver held a commercial motor vehicle operator's license or permit during the time period CFR 391.25.

Effective January 30, 2015 when a driver renews a medical certification the motor carrier must obtain a new MVR for the state of licensure with the medical certification information on the MVR.

So how will a carrier verify that a driver is physically qualified? This is done by obtaining a copy of the driver's driving record and including it in the driver's qualification file. Do keep in mind that in addition to the current requirement that motor carriers obtain and review each driver's driving record once a year, motor carriers will also have to make sure the driver's record includes valid and current medical certificate/card information.

This means that every time a medical certificate/card is renewed and turned in to the driver licensing agency, the motor carrier will need to obtain a new driving record that reflects this current information and place it in the driver's qualification file. The motor carrier will need to take timing into account when obtaining the new MVR that reflects the driver's current medical status. Once a driver turns in his/her medical certificate/card to the state licensing agency, the state has 10 days to enter

Advocates Release 2018 Roadmap of State Highway Safety Laws

The Advocated for Highway and Auto Safety have released the 2018 version of their Roadmap for State Highway Safety Laws that the group wishes to see enacted. This is the 15th edition of an annual report that rates all 50 states and the District of Columbia on the adoption of 16 traffic safety laws; according to the report, there are over 400 missing safety laws nationwide.

The group promotes two tracks to improving highway safety. The first track involves the adoption of effective state highway safety laws that encourage the use of seat belts, motorcycle helmets, and child safety seats. These laws also provide safeguards for teen, distracted, and impaired drivers. The second track is adoption of advanced safety technologies that are already on the market, such as collision avoidance, automated speed and red-light enforcement systems, and ignition interlocks.
